INVASIVE HONEYSUCKLE

We are concerned about the invasive bush honeysuckle in the common grounds. Lately more and more residents also have expressed their concerns. It is easily recognized in early spring as the first plant to turn bright green. Invasive honeysuckle came from Asia and was introduced as a fast way to provide privacy between areas. Over time it was found that the plant takes over and blocks the germination of new, natural growth in the forest. This means no reproduction of native trees and growth to replace the mature trees which die off. Since this article appeared two years ago, CLW II has had 7 removal/poison sessions and will schedule another in the fall of 2019. Contact Dexter Hall at droodhall@gmail.com for details.

There were several options:

- 1) Do nothing and keep the privacy but eventually the native trees will be gone and there won't be much except the honeysuckle. Remember, the plant is invasive and does not respect property boundaries.
- 2) Remove the plants and poison the roots so there is no further growth. This requires cutting out the plant and removing the brush from the woods as the brush does not compact, which means no unsightly large brush piles in the woods. The brush needs to be hauled to the curb for chipping.

Option 2) was chosen. CLW II homeowners have volunteered to cut, poison the roots, and drag the plants to central locations. The subdivision is paying for chipping. Please review with your neighbors what you and they can do to eradicate the honeysuckle near your homes.

Thank You,
The Trustees
